

Output module service

The Xsdot output module enables the connection of hardware output switches on a server. This module is used by the Alarm manager to create physical and audible alarms. This module is also used for general output switching functionalities.

